LYING IN STATE

Official pitches late-night cab surcharge

Dilemma. Belief among many on city council is that cab levels are right but too few drivers work peak hours

Allowing Calgary cabbies to charge extra for late-night rides could help overcome a peak-hour vehicle shortage, suggests one alderman.

John Mar, representative for Ward 8, has posted a video online asking for feedback on a motion he's mulling that would call for analysis of a late-night cab surcharge.

"Our problem is that we are having difficulty having taxi drivers come out and drive at those late-night periods, between midnight and 5 a.m.," Mar said.

The potential surcharge would follow a similar model used in Edmonton since 2008 that sees a $3 charge added onto a taxi bill for rides between 11 p.m. and 4 a.m. Mar suggested the Calgary rate could be up to $5.

Rajiv Kapil with the Calgary Cab Drivers Association said he backs Mar's idea, adding that he's written letters to the mayor in the past calling for the surcharge.

"There would be more cabs on the road and the wait time would definitely be reduced," he said.

Some industry representatives have anticipated a rise in taxi demand with the introduction of strengthened administrative penalties for impaired driving in Alberta effective Sept. 1.

But Stephanie Ho-Lem, chair of the volunteer-run taxi limousine advisory committee, was quick to point out that city council recently approved 55 new cab licences with a requirement that the plate holder drive overnight Friday and Saturday. "I'm a member of the public too ... $5 is a big jump," Ho-Lem said of the possible surcharge. JEREMY NOLAIS/METRO

Arson suspected

Investigators looking into string of garage fires

Three garage fires in the span of four hours in southern Calgary over the weekend have piqued the interest of arson investigators.

"In the wee hours of the morning, fires don't typically start in recyclable containers and things like that on their own," Insp. Paul Stacey said.

"These things are just giant red flags."

The first fire was reported shortly after midnight on Saturday in the 1700 block of 49 Avenue S.W.

That was followed by a second fire, in the 9500 block of Warren Road S.E. around 3:15 a.m., and a third blaze an hour later, in the 100 block of Chinook Drive S.W.

Man shot after dispute at karaoke bar, police say

A 41-year-old man was recovering in hospital on Sunday after being shot at a karaoke bar following a dispute, according to police.

"Witnesses are telling us there was an argument that occurred prior to the shooting and that may have been related to the shooting," Insp. Paul Stacey said.

The incident, which took place at about 1:30 a.m. in the 4800 block of Macleod Trail, may be related to organized crime, Stacey added.

Police believe the victim, who sustained non-life-threatening injuries, was not the shooter's intended target.

Police investigators combing through evidence after massive, suspicious blaze

A suburban neighbourhood in southeast Calgary "looked like Armageddon," one police officer said, after a major fire on Sunday destroyed a partially built condo complex, seriously damaged two more and melted the exteriors of more than a dozen vehicles parked on an adjacent street.

"It was a massive fire," Insp. Paul Stacey said Sunday afternoon, as firefighters continued to deal with hot spots from the three-alarm blaze that broke out around 2:30 a.m. in the 600 block of McKenzie Towne Drive S.E.

There were no reported injuries, but the scale of the destruction appeared to be enormous.

Police blocked off several streets for most of the day as firefighters battled the blaze and arson investigators were called in.

"We're thinking it's suspicious," Stacey said. "For a fire in an abandoned place or a place under construction to happen at 2:30 in morning, it begs some questions."

Heat from the fire caused the tires on cars parked on the far side of the street to explode, said Calgary Fire Department spokesman Jayson Doyscher. It also melted plastic components and singed the paint jobs on many vehicles.

"That's quite a bit of damage for that distance," Doyscher said while glancing at the cars still parked on the street.

One woman who lives in a nearby condo with a bedroom facing the fire said she looked out her window Sunday morning and all she could see was "a lot of flames."

The cause of the fire remains under investigation and an estimate of the total damages was not immediately available.

Details

- Some nearby residents were evacuated from their homes due to smoke in the area and gas lines damaged by the fire.
- Calgary Transit vehicles provided temporary shelter to those evacuated.
- Promenade Way and McKenzie Towne Drive S.E. were closed Sunday morning but reopened to traffic later in the day, while McKenzie Towne Gate remained closed.

Leader. Province mourns death of Alberta's 10th premier, to pay respects over the next two days

edmonton@metronews.ca

Alberta's 10th premier arrived on Sunday at what was his office for 14 years, as the province prepares to mourn Peter Lougheed over the next two days.

Accompanied by an Edmonton police motorcade, Lougheed's casket arrived along with his two sons, who walked into the legislature rotunda behind their father.

Though Lougheed's arrival was not widely publicized in advance, about 100 people turned out and, after he entered, a quiet round of applause broke out.

Braden O'Neill said he learned about the arrival just minutes before, but rushed down to pay his respects.

"I grew up knowing that Alberta owes its place on the national stage and its national leadership, really, to Mr. Lougheed's vision."

O'Neill, 25, was not alive during Lougheed's term in office, but said he knows the respected politician brought a lot to the province.

"Prior to Mr. Lougheed, Alberta didn't have the same kind of voice on the national stage," he said.

Sharon Hazen also came to remember a man whom she thinks of as one of Alberta's political fathers.

"I liked the legacy that he left for Albertans. I liked that he stood up for Albertans and Canadians," she said.

Members of the public can pay their respects over the next two days, beginning today at 10:30 a.m., as Lougheed lies in state in the legislature rotunda.

The province says that members of Lougheed's family will be available in the legislature's rotunda to accept condolences from the public while the coffin is on display.

The coffin will be closed during the public viewing at the legislature.

Lougheed led the Progressive Conservatives to victory over the governing Social Credit party in 1971. He remained premier until 1985, and the Tory party has remained in power ever since.

Alberta Premier Alison Redford announced last week she was returning home early from a trade mission to China because of Lougheed's death. Redford had known Lougheed from her earliest days in politics and has often spoken of him as a mentor.

Policy change? Education Minister wants school-board expenses disclosed for the public to see

Alberta's education minister has made it clear he wants all expenses accrued by elected officials and top executives with local school boards disclosed for the public to see.

Jeff Johnson said his policy falls in line with measures recently announced by Premier Alison Redford that will see bills accumulated by cabinet ministers, government caucus members and others posted online every two months.

John said school boards provincewide should not be shy about following suit.

"You're elected locally and you have that autonomy, but our expectation is that you will adopt similar policies," he said. "And, of course, if boards don't do it, that's when you have to look at what are the next steps to set regulations ... to make it as easy as possible for Albertans to see it."

The Calgary Board of Education has already announced it will begin publishing expenses for top executives next month and the board of trustees appears primed to follow suit.

Expense disclosure is also a top priority for the Calgary Catholic School District, according to trustee chair Mary Martin, who said her board plans to address the matter during its next governance session.

"We have discussed it," Martin said Sunday. "Certainly there's a warmth to doing whatever we can to be as transparent as possible."

Johnson did not set a deadline for expense disclosure by Alberta boards but said sometime this school year would be "optimal."

After-hours festival planner eyes key partnership

Gathering. Calgary's Nuit Blanche could join forces with Sled Island music festival

jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Organizers of an after-hours festival in Calgary's downtown are eyeing a key partnership that could see their event stretched over several days next time around.

Calgary's first ever Nuit Blanche ran late Saturday into the early-morning hours Sunday at Olympic Plaza, drawing up to 15,000 attendees in the process.

The event centred around large interactive art exhibits, including a 5,000 light-bulb structure and a giant shack that housed a Belfast-style pub, which reportedly drew hour-long lineups from attendees who couldn't wait to get inside.

While Saturday's turnout far exceeded director Wayne Baerwaldt's expectations, he's already looking at expanding, possibly through a partnership with local four-day music festival Sled Island.

"We're thinking they have a built-in audience of kids who aren't afraid of being out at night," Baerwaldt said. "The thinking would be to run it late four to five nights, not just one."

Nuit Blanche was originally conceived in Paris in 2002 with a primary focus on making contemporary art accessible to the general public. Nowadays, the festival draws upwards of one million people. A similar event started in Toronto in 2006.

Reached via email Sunday, Sled Island festival director Lindsay Shedden stressed that no partnership has been formalized but added it was great to see a high turnout for Nuit Blanche's Calgary debut.

"In a lot of ways, Nuit Blanche and Sled Island have very similar objectives and goals," she said.

Fire jumps from car to car to fence to house

Fire broke out in one vehicle, spread to another vehicle and then to a fence before setting a nearby rooming house alight, prompting an evacuation of the home, according to the fire department.

No one was injured in the two-alarm blaze, which started at about 4 p.m. on Friday afternoon in the 4300 block of Bowness Road.

The block was temporarily closed to traffic and fire crews were able to quickly knock down the flames.

The cause of the fire is under investigation, and an estimate of damage was not available. METRO

Politicians, voters bracing for bitter fall Parliament sitting

'Combat zone.' New poll suggests tight race between Conservatives, Liberals and NDP

A quiet summer has given Prime Minister Stephen Harper's Conservatives some breathing room as they head Monday into what could be an acrimonious fall sitting of Parliament.

A new poll gives the governing party a seven-point lead over the Opposition New Democrats — a cushion they may need if a second omnibus budget-implementation bill sparks the same public backlash and all-out parliamentary warfare its predecessor did last spring.

The Canadian Press Harris-Decima survey put Conservative support at 34 per cent of respondents, the NDP at 27, the Liberals at 24 and the Greens at seven.

The results suggest Canadians may be slowly returning to "more traditional patterns of voting behaviour," said Harris-Decima chairman Allan Gregg.

Until now, New Democrats had been running neck and neck with — or even slightly ahead of — the ruling party, eating into core Conservative support among older, male and rural voters and core Liberal support among female and urban voters.

A relatively sleepy summer with little federal political controversy has likely helped settle voters back into a somewhat more traditional pattern. But Monday's resumption of Parliament could shake things up again.

"As we know, the House has become a combat zone and, absent that, things do settle down; there aren't those events that drive people's change in viewpoint as much," Gregg said.

Just how much of an enemy Parliament proves to be to Harper's Conservatives will revolve primarily around the second budget-implementation bill, which government House leader Peter Van Loan describes as the "cornerstone legislation" of a fall sitting focused on job creation and economic growth.

Omnibus

The first omnibus budget bill was a massive grab-bag of measures, many that had little to do with the 2012 budget, including:

- A rewrite of environmental-protection legislation.
- An overhaul of employment insurance.
- Changes to employment-equity law.
- New rules for political advocacy by charities.

Lethal injection. Montana legal battle could save Canadian inmate's life

A complex legislative process and lack of political will could derail any plans to change the way Montana carries out its executions, but may be a ray of hope for a Canadian on death row.

This month's ruling by a judge who declared the state's method of execution "unconstitutional" could do something 30 years of legal wrangling and appeals have failed to do for Canadian Ronald Smith — prevent his execution for the 1982 murders of two young Montana men.

But it's not a simple matter.

The American Civil Liberties Union filed a civil lawsuit in 2008 on behalf of Smith that argued the lethal injections the state uses are cruel and unusual punishment and violate the right to human dignity.

District Court Judge Jeffrey Sherlock, in his Sept. 6 ruling, pointed to problems such as lack of training for individuals who administer the drug, and a discrepancy over whether two or three drugs should be used. He also questioned the method used to determine whether an inmate is actually unconscious before receiving the lethal injection.

"The Montana protocol has problems," Sherlock said in his 26-page judgment.

Pakistani protesters march on U.S. Consulate over film

Anti-Islam. Leader of Hezbollah calls for protests against movie that denigrates Prophet Muhammad

Hundreds of Pakistanis protesting an anti-Islam film broke through a barricade near the U.S. Consulate in the southern city of Karachi on Sunday, sparking clashes with police in which one demonstrator was killed and more than a dozen injured.

In a move that could escalate tensions around the Arab world, the leader of the Hezbollah militant group called for protests against the movie, saying protesters should not only "express our anger" at U.S. embassies but urge leaders to act.

The film, which denigrates Islam's Prophet Muhammad, has sparked violent protests in many Muslim countries in recent days, including one in Libya in which the U.S. ambassador was killed. The U.S. has responded by deploying additional military forces to increase security in certain hot spots.

In a televised speech, Hezbollah leader Sheik Hassan Nasrallah said the U.S. must be held accountable for the film, which was produced in the United States. The U.S. government has condemned the film. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Flying Magnotta back to Canada a $375K job

Body-parts case. Private jet that flew alleged killer from Germany to Canada comes at hefty price tag for taxpayers

The cost to Canadian taxpayers for Luka Rocco Magnotta's extradition from Germany, aboard a government plane fit for the prime minister, is expected to be about $375,000.

The estimated price tag for the accused killer's unusual journey home includes flight expenses, catering service and a hotel stay for authorities who fetched the fugitive from across the Atlantic, according to federal documents obtained by The Canadian Press.

Berlin police arrested Magnotta in June to end an international manhunt following the killing of Chinese national Jun Lin.

Luka Rocco Magnotta is taken by police from a Canadian military plane in Mirabel, Que., on June 18. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Magnotta is facing several charges in connection with the gruesome slaying, including first-degree murder. The 30-year-old porn actor and stripper has pleaded not guilty to all counts.

Magnotta flew home aboard one of the military's CC-150 Polaris Airbus transport planes, an aircraft that can be configured to accommodate prominent passengers such as the prime minister, foreign dignitaries, the Governor General and members of the Royal Family.

At the time, a police official told media that commercial airlines had declined requests to transport Magnotta across the Atlantic.

Montreal police were thankful the federal government made the plane available for the extradition.

"How can we bring him back to Montreal on a commercial flight with other people sitting on board?" Cmdr. Ian Lafreniere said, shortly after Magnotta emerged from the plane. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Reward for killing Rushdie gets a boost

Old vendetta. 1989 fatwa by late Iranian leader against British Indian author calls for his death over depictions of Muhammad in novel

A semi-official religious foundation in Iran has increased a reward it had offered for the killing of British author Salman Rushdie to $3.3 million US from $2.8 million, a newspaper reported, days after protests coursed through the Muslim world over alleged insults to the Prophet Muhammad.

Hardline Jomhoori Eslami daily and other newspapers reported on Sunday that the move appeared to be linked to protests over an amateurish anti-Islam film, which crowds in some 20 countries said drove them to defend their faith — in some cases by attacking American embassies.

The report said the 15 Khordad Foundation will pay the higher reward to whoever acts on the 1989 fatwa, or religious edict, issued by Iran's late leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, which called for the death of the author of The Satanic Verses because the novel was considered blasphemous.

The paper said the decision to boost the original reward, offered in the 1990s, came from foundation head Ayatollah Hassan Saneii.

Khomeini's fatwa sent Rushdie into hiding under police protection, but that didn't stop him from writing more novels. In 1990, he published an apology and reiterated his respect for Islam.

Zimbabwe's PM is warned by court about bigamy

Tribal laws. Tsvangirai marries Saturday but doesn't sign marriage register after court rules he's still married to another woman

Zimbabwe's prime minister said at his marriage ceremony Saturday that he had to date several women to find the one he truly loves.

Prime Minister Morgan Tsvangirai dismissed as propaganda the reports by the state media that say his private life is irresponsible.

A Zimbabwe magistrate ruled on Friday that Tsvangirai could not go ahead with a formal wedding after a jilted ex-lover filed a suit against him claiming the two were still married under Zimbabwe's tribal laws. The court held that Tsvangirai paid a traditional bride price for the woman last year and therefore was married to her.

The magistrate cautioned Tsvangirai that if he signed a legal marriage register with his new wife he could be prosecuted for bigamy.

Tsvangirai, 60, and Elizabeth Macheka, 35, exchanged vows but did not sign the register. Tsvangirai said that he had not made errors in seeing women since his wife of 31 years, Susan, 50, died in 2009. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Somalia. New president sworn into office after failed assassination

Somalia's new leader was inaugurated Sunday amid tight security in the capital, Mogadishu, four days after President Hassan Skeikh Mohamud survived an assassination attempt.

Mohamud, a teacher and activist, won the election last week against outgoing President Sheik Sharif Sheikh Ahmed by a legislative vote of 190 to 79.

The attempt on Mohamud's life on his second day in office highlighted the serious security challenges he faces as he takes the helm of a country that has not had a stable government for more than two decades. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

- The UN-backed political process that resulted in Hassan Skeikh Mohamud's election was condemned by Islamist militants who said it was manipulated by the West.
- But Mohamud has the support of the international community, which wants him to succeed and bring stability to the troubled Horn of Africa nation.

Web driving unethical puppy farms: Experts

Animal welfare. Health problems common among pets

KIERON MONKS
Metro World News

A dustbin full of decomposing puppies was discovered at a farm in Wales last week. The previous day, investigators seized 200 dogs from a suspected puppy mill in Arkansas, where conditions were so unhealthy they wore biohazard suits. In Australia, a government review has been ordered into a problem that is out of control.

Websites such as puppyfind.com make distribution as easy as buying DVDs, offering a directory of 50,000 sellers to choose from. "Puppies for sale may be shipped worldwide and include crate," the site claims.

But experts believe that Internet shopping is encouraging unethical puppy farmers, with the Humane Society of the United States (HSUS) estimating that these farms now produce 400,000 litters a year.

"The Internet has made it easy for a business to seem respectable," Andy Robbins, a spokesman for the Royal Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Britain's largest animal-welfare charity, told Metro. "People see a slick website and assume everything is fine. Technology has also made it much easier to forge health certificates."

A Kennel Club survey found that 20 per cent of British puppy owners bought their animal online, which can lead to a nasty surprise.

"We compare it to battery-farming chickens, with the dogs treated as machines producing litters continuously in awful conditions," Kennel Club spokeswoman Heidi Ancell told Metro. "Some turn out OK, but many will have health problems and the puppy often dies soon after."

Ancell added it was a "potential risk" that traumatized or sick animals could be a threat to their owners.

Thousands of puppy distributors can be found online, and experts say Internet shopping is worsening the problem of inhumane dog breeding.
CHRISTOPHER FURLONG/GETTY IMAGES FILE

Tips on buying a puppy

- Avoid buying online.
- Insist on seeing the puppy with its mother in its breeding environment.
- Have the animal receive a full medical from a trusted doctor.

A year later, Occupy struggles to define itself

Sept. 17 celebrations. What started as protest against corporate greed became protest against 'every social ill'

The Raging Grannies, an Occupy Wall Street music group, sing a song in New York City's Foley Square on Sunday, on the eve of the one-year anniversary of the start of their movement. ANDREW BURTON/GETTY IMAGES Occupy Wall Street began to disintegrate in rapid fashion last winter, when the weekly meetings in New York City devolved into a spectacle of fist fights and vicious arguments.

Punches were thrown and objects were hurled at moderators' heads. Protesters accused each other of being patriarchal and racist and domineering. Nobody could agree on anything and nobody was in charge. The moderators went on strike and refused to show up, followed in quick succession by the people who kept the meeting minutes. And then the meetings stopped altogether.

In the city where the movement was born, Occupy was falling apart. "We weren't talking about real things at that point," says Pete Dutro, a tattoo artist who used to manage Occupy's finances but became disillusioned by the infighting and walked away months ago. "We were talking about each other."

The trouble with Occupy Wall Street, a year after it bloomed in a granite park in lower Manhattan and spread across the globe, is that nobody really knows what it is anymore.

On Monday, protesters will converge near the New York Stock Exchange to celebrate Occupy's anniversary, marking the day they began camping out in Zuccotti Park in lower Manhattan's financial district. Marches and rallies in more than 30 cities around the world will commemorate the day.

About 300 people observing the anniversary marched Saturday, and at least a dozen were arrested, mostly on charges of disorderly conduct, police said.

But the movement is now a shadow of its mighty infancy, when a group of young people harnessed the power of a disillusioned nation and took to the streets chanting about corporate greed and inequality.

Back then it was a rallying cry, a force to be reckoned with. But as the encampments were broken up and protesters lost a gathering place, Occupy in turn lost its ability to organize.

The movement had grown too large too quickly. Without leaders or specific demands, what started as a protest against income inequality turned into an amorphous protest against everything wrong with the world. "We were there to occupy Wall Street," Dutro says. "Not to talk about every social ill that we have."

Twitter hands over records in Occupy case

Twitter on Friday agreed to hand over about three months' worth of tweets to a judge overseeing the criminal trial of an Occupy Wall Street protester, a case that has become a closely watched fight over how much access law enforcement agencies should have to material posted on social networks.

The social networking site had been threatened with steep fines if it did not comply with Judge Matthew Sciarrino Jr.'s order to turn over the records in the case of Malcolm Harris.

But the judge said he would keep the records sealed until after a Sept. 21 hearing challenging his ruling on the messages.

Twitter's lawyer, Terryl Brown, called the options it faced — waiving its right to appeal or being held in contempt of court — "unfair" and "unjust," though ultimately Brown handed over a thick white envelope full of Harris' information.

"We are disappointed that Twitter is essentially giving up the fight," Harris' attorney Martin Stolar said after the court hearing.

The Manhattan district attorney's office said Harris' messages could show whether he was aware of the police orders he's charged with disregarding during a protest at the Brooklyn Bridge.

The case began as one of hundreds of disorderly conduct prosecutions after an Oct. 1 march in New York that brought the Occupy protest movement its first burst of worldwide attention.

GOING TO REUNION SETS OFF NEW SCHOOL OF THOUGHT

URBAN COMPASS
Darren Krause
darren.krause@metronews.ca

Up until couple of days prior, my mind was made up. I wasn't going to go to my 20-year high school reunion.

I didn't go to my 10-year, and I can count on one hand the number of people that I've kept in touch with since that class of around 150 donned the gowns and mortar boards at Foothills Composite High School in Okotoks way back in 1992. So why go?

But after hitting up Facebook (which I rarely, if ever, do), I saw that one of my good friends from high school, Dave Sorkilmo, was going.

Now, if there's anyone I've semi-sorta-kinda kept in touch with after leaving high school, it was Dave. Really, I've probably seen his wife more in the past 20 years than I have him, but it was an opportunity to reconnect.

And I thought, "If Dave's there, maybe I'll see Carolyn, Janine, Paula, Brady...." You get the picture. So that got the hamster wheel spinning a little more: I should get off my duff on Saturday night and go.

So I did.

No catch to catching up

We live our lives at break-neck speed and often don't make time for those personal connections that fulfilled us as teens. It often feels like an inconvenience. It's not. It's enriching.

I got to the Crystal Ridge golf club, went in and immediately saw Dave. Whew.

And as I waited in line for a name tag and to put in my $20 I noticed a few more familiar faces. Huh. This could be an interesting night.

And it was.

I caught up with a lot of people. I shared a few laughs, a few memories, and, to be honest, a few awkward silences, but it turned out to be a terrific time.

It was an exciting evening I almost missed out on.

My business is people and connections — and I nearly opted to blow off these people, many of whom I spent the best years of my life with.

If you've got a reunion or something similar, don't make the same mistake I almost did. Sure, you may have a few awkward moments, but the rekindling of relationships is well worth it, even if you only stay in touch on occasion.

We live our lives at break-neck speed and often don't make time for those personal connections that fulfilled us as teens. It often feels like an inconvenience. It's not. It's enriching.

I have little doubt Dave and I and our families will get together again, sooner rather than later.

Who knows what would have happened had I chosen not to go at all.

Now you're just pulling my finger

More than just twiddling thumbs

A Bavarian man pulls his opponent over the table during the German Finger Wrestling championships in Warngau, Germany, on Sunday.

Competitors battled for the title in this traditional rural sport where the winner has to pull his opponent over the marked line on the table.

In the game — also known as Fingerhakeln — the competitors use nothing more than their fingers and a leather band to defeat opponents.

Lederhosen-clad men

- More than 150 men in Warngau took part.
- Legend has it that finger wrestling started as a way to settle arguments, Time magazine says.
- Bloody knuckles, stretched ligaments and tendons are all part of the competition, according to the magazine.
- The tug-of-war is now a regulated sport, with rules governing the size of the table and width of the leather band.

Parking-lot birth

How to obtain a lifetime supply of NASCAR tickets

A New Hampshire woman and her baby are doing fine after the woman gave birth in the New Hampshire Motor Speedway parking lot.

Shawna Arnold began going into labour Friday and she and her boyfriend began driving to a hospital. But when she realized she was about to give birth on the way, they made a pit stop at the racetrack parking lot in Loudon.

Arnold tells WMUR-TV that she and her boyfriend delivered the baby, named Katie, in their car. An EMT at the track then came to help, and the couple and the baby were taken to a hospital.

Speedway general manager Jerry Gappens has awarded the baby two tickets to NASCAR races for the rest of her life.

Spike Lee doc transcends the man in the mirror

Bad 25. Documentary puts spotlight on the undeniable talent and human side of Michael Jackson — behind the fame and chaos

scene@metronews.ca

What do you do when you're the man behind the bestselling album in music history?

You vow that your next one will be even better, naturally.

Such is the pursuit of perfection that propelled — and plagued — Michael Jackson as he spent two years writing and composing Bad, his followup to 1982's Thriller.

In Spike Lee's documentary, Bad 25, we learn that in the Bad years, Jackson scrawled '100 million' on his bathroom mirror, so every morning as he brushed his teeth, he'd be reminded of his goal — sell 100 million records.

The album, released in 1987, ended up being a commercial and critical success, with around 40 million copies sold. But it never came close to the sales of Thriller, which rang in somewhere near the 100 million mark.

The failure to reach his 100 million goal wasn't for lack of effort on Jackson's part, though.

Bad 25 reveals the late-night dance sessions, the meticulous recordings and the almost pathological work ethic of a man who seemed to be chasing a near-impossible dream.

"Michael got his work ethic from his father," says Lee on Saturday at Toronto's Trump Hotel, dressed in a T-shirt sporting Michael Jackson's iconic Bad pose, just hours before the North American premiere of his documentary at TIFF.

"(Joe Jackson) had him singing and dancing from five, six years old. I'm not going to make a villain out of Joe Jackson. Many people do, but he got their asses out of Gary Indiana and his children didn't have to work at the steel mill that he slaved at. Something worked. He's not all bad."

But as anyone knows, getting out of Gary and becoming the world's biggest pop star didn't come without its struggles. As Jackson was promoting Bad and selling out venues around the world in a 16-month tour that set three world records, darkness was moving in on his star power.

The media became increasingly cruel as Jackson's behaviour became increasingly bizarre — there were tales of him sleeping in a hyperbaric chamber, his pet chimpanzee Bubbles, and rumours that he had tried to buy the Elephant Man's bones.

In the documentary, Jackson's choreographer and confidant Vince Patterson shares some advice he gave the superstar: Don't ever let a bully know they're hurting you.

It's a poignant moment when we are reminded that despite his fame and fortune, Jackson was human — a remarkably talented human — and that somewhere in the mess of scandals and rumours, the wonder of that talent got lost.

Bad 25 reminds us just how wondrous that talent was. Witness the lean in Smooth Criminal (don't hold your breath — this doc doesn't reveal the secret behind it), or the head-turning intro to The Way You Make Me Feel.

For Lee, Bad 25 is an ode to Jackson the performer; a tribute to an artist and friend he respected. "I try not to focus on the fact that he's not here, because the way I take it, Michael's not here in his physical form, but he's here in his spiritual form and his music is here," says Lee.

So bad it's good

The reissue of the Bad album, Bad 25, comes out on Tuesday.

- Album. Includes unreleased demos and a DVD of his performance at Wembley Stadium, attended by Prince Charles and Princess Diana.
- Documentary. Spike Lee's documentary Bad 25 will air on ABC on November 22.

Character resurrected. After sacrificing himself in the line of duty, Agent Steve Jinks is back to fight another day in sci-fi series

STEPHEN ERAMO
scene@metronews.ca

During last year's penultimate episode of Warehouse 13, Aaron Ashmore's character of Agent Steve Jinks sacrificed himself in the line of duty.

In the sci-fi world, though, you never really die, and sometimes you can actually cheat death. Steve has managed to do just that — with the help of his Warehouse friends — and is back to fight another day in the show's fourth season. For Ashmore, taking that journey with his character was something he thoroughly enjoyed as an actor.

"The show's writers did a great job of building up my character throughout last season, and I really liked the fact that he basically ended up putting himself on the line to save others," says Ashmore, whose character returned in Friday's episode of the Showcase series.

"I think Steve was very much aware that going undercover would be dangerous, but he had become part of this (Warehouse) family and believed so much in what they were doing that he was willing to risk his life like that. I loved that the writers took Steve there and gave him that much responsibility.

"When I initially read the script (Emily Lake) and the scene where Steve's teammates find his body, I thought, 'Wow, this is so good.' It was staged in a pretty powerful way. I mean, it's one thing as an actor to sit there and play dead, but here you had the performances of all the other actors coming in and their reactions to finding Steve's body. When I saw it all pieced together in the end I found it incredibly moving."

Fellow Warehouse agent Claudia Donovan (Allison Scagliotti) played a pivotal role in resurrecting Steve, and while there is no romance brewing between the two, her actions further impact the characters' relationship.

"I can't give too much away, but Claudia and Steve count on each other quite a bit this season and in ways that perhaps aren't obvious right away to viewers," notes Ashmore.

"Then, however, things begin to develop and it's clear that they really need one another to survive."

Warehouse 13 airs Friday nights on Showcase. HANDOUT

Kristen 'poured her heart out'

Have Kristen Stewart and Robert Pattinson moved back in together?

"They pretty much decided they couldn't live without each other," a source tells Perez Hilton.

"Kristen poured her heart out to Robert and told him it was a one-off and a mistake. Rob sees it as Kristen made a really stupid mistake."

This conversation apparently took place on Reese Witherspoon's ranch — while Ryan Phillippe took notes hiding in a laundry basket. (Kidding Ry.)

Nicki Minaj and Keith Urban join Idol

THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

The new judges panel for the 12th season of American Idol was announced Sunday via a press release from Fox. Joining confirmed judges Mariah Carey and Randy Jackson will be the new additions of Nicki Minaj and Keith Urban.

"With the exciting addition of Mariah Carey, Keith Urban and Nicki Minaj, alongside Randy Jackson, American Idol's star power has never been so great," said Idol executive producer Simon Fuller in a boilerplate quote. Judging by other statements in the release — "We've put together one of the most exciting judging panels around," said Mike Darnell, president of alternative entertainment for Fox — you can tell the network honchos are feeling the heat from the other all-star panels at rival singing competitions such as The Voice and X-Factor, where Britney Spears is currently killing it as a judge.

What do you think of these new additions? As always, feel free to write in to let me know your opinion. As for this gossip columnist, I just hope Nicki Minaj's multiple personalities can make up for Urban's lack of one.

Royal lawyers: Block those nips!

Will the Italian media group Mondadori lose their shirts for publishing photos of Kate Middleton without hers on?

It certainly looks that way, with the Royal Family seeking damages from Mondadori, which is owned by former Italian premier Silvio Berlusconi.

Lawyers for the Royals are also going to court in France to try to stop further publication in that country of the now-infamous topless photos of Kate.

Meanwhile, YouPorn.com — a site that usually doesn't need publicity — has generated some by offering an "open checkbook" to procure the snaps.

It might just be me, but it's hard to find any sympathy for Middleton. When you know you are going to become the next Queen of England, it's time to put your topless sunbathing days behind you. Seems like a fair swap, right?

Mobile manners: Teach them etiquette, and take notes yourself

Teach your kids mobile manners early on. ISTOCK

Parenting. Back to school shopping often involves getting the latest cellphone. Too bad the instruction manuals don't include lessons on behaviour

IT'S ALL RELATIVE
Kathy Buckworth,
kathybuckworth.com

The new school year is well underway, and with it, a new learning challenge for parents: How to teach kids to use their cellphones.

Not just from a safety perspective (not texting or talking on a handheld device when driving, not walking across busy roads and texting, not giving away passwords, etc.), but from a "mobile manners" point of view as well.

It's important as role models that parents practice what they preach and adhere to the following rules themselves.

• Not texting or answering calls when in the middle of a conversation, unless you have advised the person you're speaking with you might have to do so at some point.

• No texting during mealtime. (First one to pick up their phone does the dishes!)

• Enforcing that you support the "no cellphone" rule in the classroom by not calling or texting your kids during the school day unless urgent.

• Not talking on a cellphone in quiet public places.

It's also important to research the coverage plan you want to purchase.

Examine the type of usage you expect your child to have (just texting and calling, no Internet access for younger kids) and speak to an independent dealer who can show you different carrier packages.

Unlimited plans are available, and a pre-paid option will easily keep the budget in line.

Depending on the age of the child and his earning ability, have him pay for the monthly usage to get an understanding of the expense.

And remember, even the "smartest" of phones can be simplified down to just texting and talking, depending on the plan you choose, so repurposing an old smartphone of your own is an option.

Cells by the numbers

According to a new study by President's Choice Services Inc., 48 per cent of Canadian parents with children aged 11 and older now let their kids carry a cellphone. The majority of Canadians (52 per cent) felt somewhere between the ages of 13 to 16 was an appropriate age to give a child a mobile device, compared to the 31 per cent of Canadians who felt that teens age 17 or older could better handle the responsibility of a cellphone. Approximately 10 per cent cited 9 to 12 as the right age bracket; while only one per cent felt children aged 6 to 8 should have their own mobile device.

Head lice don't have to create a hairy situation

LINDA LABAN
Metro World News in Boston

Head lice isn't an aspect of parenting that anyone wants a part of, but it's so common that most end up dealing with it at some point.

"Lice are so prevalent, I've had to deal with it as a parent, too," says Boston-based pediatrician Dr. Nancy Kahn, a clinical instructor of pediatric medicine at Harvard Medical School.

"One study found that one in four elementary school kids gets them. They're so contagious, but they have to be transported by another vehicle. You get them from sharing scrunchies, a comb, brush or hat with someone who has them."

The big problem isn't killing the adult lice; it's detecting the eggs, called nits, and removing them to prevent further infection.

Nits stick like glue to the hair shaft. "The eggs are grayish-white," Kahn says. "If you see a white spot on the hair that can be flicked off, it isn't nits, it's dandruff or [lint]. If it's stuck on the hair, it's nits."

Treatment varies from over-the-counter shampoos and topical solutions, but "these contain pesticides, so there is the worry that you're putting pesticides on your child's head for several hours," Kahn says.

For a home remedy, try olive oil: "This basically suffocates them," she says.

Hair to help

Here are some resources to rid your child's hair of lice.

- Ladibugs. This chemical-free line includes shampoo, conditioner, leave-in mint spray, serum and mousse. The company also offers a 24-hour hotline if you find yourself in need of help. ladibugshaircare.com
- Fairy Tales Hair Cares. Its Rosemary Repel line of hair care utilizes organic ingredients such as rosemary, tea tree, citronella, peppermint and lavender oils to combat the pesky bugs. You can also download its free iPhone app, The Facts of Lice, to learn about outbreaks in your area or report one of your own. fairytaleshaircare.com
- LiceGuard. In addition to pesticide-free shampoo, LiceGuard also makes the Robi Comb, an electronic comb that kills lice on contact. liceguard.com

Slow cook mouth-watering flavours of delectable paella

ROSE REISMAN

I love paella but I find it takes too long to cook, especially if I've just walked in the door and want something on the table in a hurry. The slow cooker is the perfect solution. All you have to do is add the seafood 30 minutes before you're ready to eat.

1. Cube chicken and dust with flour. Lightly coat a large, nonstick skillet with cooking spray and set over medium-high heat. Add the oil. Brown the chicken on all sides, for about 3 minutes or just until cooked. Remove from the pan and set aside.

2. Again lightly coat the pan with cooking spray. Add the sausage and cook over medium-high heat for 5 minutes or until cooked through. Remove from the pan with a slotted spoon, draining as much of the fat as possible. Set aside.

3. Wipe out pan and respray. Cook onion and garlic over medium-high heat 4 minutes or until softened. Stir in peppers and cook 3 minutes. Stir in the rice and cook for 1 minute. Add the chicken, sausage, chicken stock, tomatoes, basil, oregano, bay leaf, saffron (if using), salt and pepper. Bring to a boil.

4. Place everything in slow cooker and cook on high setting 3 hours or on low setting for 5 hours. Add shrimp and mussels during last 30 minutes if slow cooker is on the high setting, or during last 60 minutes if on low. Serve garnished with parsley. ROSE REISMAN'S FAMILY FAVOURITES (WHITECAP BOOKS)

This recipe serves four. RYAN SZULC, FROM REISMAN'S FAMILY FAVOURITES (WHITECAP BOOKS)

Ingredients

- 12 oz skinless boneless chicken breasts
- 3 tbsp all-purpose flour
- 2 tsp vegetable oil
- 6 oz mild Italian sausage, cut into 1/2-inch pieces
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 2 tsp finely chopped garlic
- 1 cup chopped red and green bell pepper
- 1 cup brown rice
- 3 cups chicken stock
- 3 cups chopped plum tomatoes
- 2 tsp dried basil
- 1 tsp dried oregano
- 1 bay leaf
- 1/2 tsp crumbled saffron threads (optional)
- pinch of salt and pepper
- 8 oz raw shrimp, peeled and deveined
- 12 mussels, scrubbed and debearded

When you find a chip that sounds healthy, check the method with which it's made because that's where a lot of the calories and fat hide.

Terra Chips (50 g) and spinach dip (2 tbsp)

420 calories/ 34 g fat
Root vegetables made into chips sounds healthier than regular potato chips. But deep frying still multiplies calories and fat.

Equivalent

Fifty grams of Terra Chips with two tablespoons of spinach dip is equal in fat to an entire McCain's thin crust whole-wheat pizza with marinated tomato and chicken.

Pop Chips (50 g) and salsa (2 tbsp)

218 calories/ 7 g fat
These chips are much lower in calories and fat. They are popped rather than fried or baked.

Comfort food reaches a whole new level. Pulled Chicken and Hominy Stew

Hominy is one of those foods you might think you've never tried, yet almost certainly have. Or at least a close relative of it.

Hominy is the name given to whole corn kernels, usually white, that have been cooked in a lye or lime solution to remove their thick hulls. The result is a tender, somewhat bulbous kernel with a chewy texture and a clean, corn flavour.

In Latin America, they're used most often in soups and stews, such as pozole, a highly seasoned stew of hominy, pork and chili peppers. The Southern staple known as grits follows a similar path. In this case, the hominy is dried after processing, then coarsely ground. The resulting meal then is cooked with water to a porridge-like consistency.

Here, it's used to make Pulled Chicken and Hominy Stew.

1. In saucepan over medium-high heat, warm oil. Add onion, garlic, cumin, cinnamon, cayenne, paprika and mustard powder.

2. Sauté until the onions are tender, about 4 minutes. Add the steak tips and sear, turning to brown, about 3 minutes.

3. Add the broth, wine, tomato paste, juice of 1 lime, and Worcestershire sauce. Bring to a simmer. Add the chicken, then cook for 15 to 20 minutes.

4. Use slotted spoon to transfer the chicken to a cutting board. Shred it and then return to pot.

5. Add the bell peppers, hominy and brown sugar. Simmer, uncovered, for 5 to 6 minutes. Season with salt and pepper, then stir in the juice of the remaining lime and the cilantro.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

This recipe serves eight. MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ingredients

- 1 tbsp olive oil
- 1 large yellow onion, diced
- 4 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 tsp each ground cumin, cinnamon, cayenne pepper, smoked paprika, mustard powder
- 1 lb steak tips, cut into 1-inch chunks
- 1 quart beef broth
- 2 cups red wine
- 6-oz can tomato paste
- Juice of 2 limes, divided
- 1 tbsp Worcestershire sauce
- 2 lbs boneless, skinless chicken breasts, cut into large chunks
- 2 red bell peppers, cored and chopped
- 29-oz can hominy, drained
- 1/4 cup packed brown sugar
- Salt and ground black pepper

Tailoring the way we learn to love our land

Guru of green.
Author suggests mixing the emotional with the ecological when teaching environmental education

BRUCE WALSH
Metro World News in Philadelphia

You're never too young to start making positive changes for our planet. ISTOCK

Best-selling author and self-help guru Daniel Goleman is known worldwide for stressing the importance of emotional intelligence in developing one's full potential.

While the term had been around for decades, Goleman's 1995 book, Emotional Intelligence: Why It Can Matter More Than IQ, popularized the concept. Broadly speaking, emotional intelligence is seen by many as an ability to gauge one's own emotions as well as the emotions of others, and to build relationships around this understanding.

Now Goleman is incorporating his environmental passions into his educational philosophy. His latest, Ecoliterate: How Educators Are Incorporating Emotional, Social and Ecological Intelligence, was written in partnership with the Berkeley-based Center for Ecoliteracy.

"In teaching people about ecological issues — whether it's K to 12 or in the university — there's something that happens on an emotional level, and that's fear and anxiety," says co-author Lisa Bennett. "We've pushed nature's systems to the brink in a lot of ways right now, so if you bring emotional intelligence to teaching about ecological issues, you can be a lot more effective."

Ecoliterate investigates eight cutting-edge environmental education programs, from Kentucky to Alaska, looking for effective blueprints for this new curriculum. While the book is primarily directed at Kindergarten to Grade 12 teachers, the authors suggest that these programs could be easily adapted for the college level.

"In Dan Goleman's seminal books, he showed how critical emotional and social intelligence is to allowing people to be effective," says Bennett. "We discovered in 'Ecoliterate' that, actually, each form of intelligence is an extension of the other, and eco-intelligence is related to both: It boosts academic achievement, because it's tied to emotional learning, and it develops strength, hope and resilience in students."

In a class that cares

We've pushed nature's systems to the brink in a lot of ways right now, so if you bring emotional intelligence to teaching about ecological issues, you can be a lot more effective.
Ecoliterate co-author Lisa Bennett

Five steps

The Center for Ecoliteracy has outlined five vital practices for teaching environmental studies to Kindergartens to Grade 12 students.

- Developing empathy for all forms of life
- Embracing sustainability as a community practice
- Making the invisible visible
- Anticipating unintended consequences
- Understanding how nature sustains life

Started an online apparel company but found the market was saturated. Switched to Luxe Box where consumers can sample new beauty products. Thirteen months later, Cao now employs 15 people and his membership base is on track to reach 100,000 people.

I knew I was on my way when... We got one order, then four, then 15. Soon my cellphone was ringing with non-stop orders. Since then we've grown extremely fast. It all started with a simple idea we wanted to test and it grew from there.

Just a few weeks ago we launched into the U.S. We are looking to build a platform where all types of products can be sampled and ordered on a subscription basis. We have some crazy growth plans in play. This is just the beginning.

Action Plan

• You've got to surround yourself with the right people. Ideas change but as long as you have a strong core team they will help you get through the difficult times.

• Fail fast, fail cheap and fail often. You won't get it the first time. Most overnight successes are built over 10 years and people have to realize they don't happen right away

• A lot of first-time entrepreneurs set themselves up for failure and then they give up. Sometimes the extra push makes all the difference. A couple of days could make an incredible difference so never give up.

Pinch pennies while hitting the books

That makes cents.
There are plenty of ways to save while funding your studies

Although post-secondary education is expensive, there are several ways to reduce costs and the financial weight of going to school.

These ways are described in a new online guide, Paying for Post-Secondary Education from the Financial Consumer Agency of Canada (@FCACan), available at itpaystoknow.gc.ca.

This guide has tips students can use right away. For example, even though it is easy to get credit cards on campus, you should use credit cards carefully and avoid using them at all if you cannot pay off the entire balance at the end of each month.

Also, you can reduce bank fees by using the automatic banking machines (ABMs) of your own financial institution rather than other institutions' machines. You can pay more than $8 in fees for withdrawing money from an ABM that does not belong to your financial institution.

A novel idea

Take heed of this book's sage advice.

- To reduce your education costs, you can buy used books and sell the ones you no longer need, or trade them for books you will need later. Check with local consignment shops for more information.

Other ways to save

Living in your own place while you go to school may be a wonderful experience, but it is much more expensive than living with your parents. In 2009, the average expenses over a four-year program for a student living alone were $77,132, compared with $51,763 for a student living at home — a difference of $25,369. If you cannot live with your parents, consider living with roommates. Sharing accommodation is usually much cheaper than living in a student residence or in your own apartment.

Tuition fees often include medical and dental insurance. However, you can usually waive the coverage provided by the school if you are already covered by your parents' or your employer's insurance plans. If you choose not to have the coverage, the cost of the insurance that would have been included automatically in your tuition fees will usually be refunded to you. This may amount to several hundred dollars a year, depending on the school's insurance plan.

Public transit passes may also be included in tuition fees, or you may get a student discount. Your student card is also a good savings tool, as many businesses offer discounts for students with cards. Ask your school's student association to give you a list of businesses offering student discounts.

Some locked-out NHL players Europe-bound

NHL. Reigning MVP Evgeni Malkin among those going abroad

With the doors locked shut at NHL arenas, the best hockey players on the planet are turning their focus to a new world of opportunities.

Every player on a NHL roster as of Sunday morning became free to seek other work for the duration of the lockout, and many started doing so immediately. Reigning NHL MVP Evgeni Malkin (Magnitogorsk) and Pavel Datsyuk (Ak Bars) were among those who signed deals to play in the Russian-based KHL while Jaromir Jagr (Kladno) is going to the Czech Republic and Jussi Jokinen (Karpat) inked a deal in Finland.

Teams from Switzerland, Sweden and Germany will come calling as well. Depending on the length of the lockout, it could result in a massive displacement of players throughout the hockey world.

The NHL locked out its players at midnight on Saturday and released a message to fans on its website the following day, saying "this is a time of year for all attention to be focused on the ice, not on a meeting room." Meanwhile, the NHLPA sent out a video montage with players talking about what they'll miss about not playing and ended with the statement: "This is an NHL owners lockout."

Nearly 400 NHL players suited up in 19 different European leagues during the lockout that cancelled the entire 2004-05 season. It was a migration that came with a fair bit of controversy as the NHLers pushed others out of jobs.

The debate has restarted again, but it's unlikely to deter many of the 750 locked-out NHLPA members.

"I'm a hockey player and it's a competitive business," said Pittsburgh Penguins captain Sidney Crosby. "Would I look forward to that opportunity of taking someone's job? No. But at the end of the day I'm a hockey player."

Now in its fifth season, the KHL believes it is in a position to capitalize on the availability of so many elite players. THE CANADIAN PRESS

"The scary part is I think you'll see some of the best players in the game (going over). Let's hope they come back when they're going to get paid the dollars they're going to get paid in some of these leagues to go play now." Calgary Flames forward Mike Cammalleri

Wise Dan blows away the field at Woodbine Mile

Wise Dan dominated the Grade 1 $1-million Ricoh Woodbine Mile on Sunday.

The five-year-old Kentucky-bred gelding went off as the prohibitive 1/2 favourite and then showed why. He sat third through the opening half-mile, then surged into the lead before blowing away the field with an emphatic 3 1/4-length victory on a firm E.P Taylor turf course at Woodbine Racetrack in Toronto.

Wise Dan posted a winning time of 1:34.07 to earn the $600,000 winner's share with the second-largest margin of victory in race history. Only Leroidesanimaux's 7 3/4-length victory in 2005 was more dominant.

Keselowski wins first race of the Chase in Chicago

Brad Keselowski raced to an impressive victory in the opening race of the Chase for the Sprint Cup, outduelling five-time champion Jimmie Johnson at Chicagoland Speedway on Sunday.

Keselowski got ahead of Johnson after a crucial pit cycle with about 35 laps remaining and led the final 26 laps in the 400-mile race, holding on comfortably from there for his first victory in a Chase race. He also takes over the points lead.

It's Keselowski's fourth victory of the season. He leads Johnson by three points.

Raonic leads Canada to Davis Cup World Group

Milos Raonic returns a volley against South Africa's Izak van der Merwe in Davis Cup action on Sunday in Montreal. PETER MCCABE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Milos Raonic wanted a dominating win Sunday after what he felt was a lax effort two days earlier.

He did exactly that and in dominant fashion, beating Izak van der Merwe 6-2, 6-2, 6-4 to clinch the Davis Cup best-of-five series over South Africa.

The victory secures Canada's spot in the elite World Group, while South Africa is relegated to zone play.

Raonic was happy he won his opening singles match but wasn't pleased with his performance. With the World Group spot in sight, the 21-year-old from Thornhill, Ont., took to the court hungry to finish on top.

"I came out with more of an accomplished goal, other than winning. I came out, did a lot of things well, played on my terms and did what I wanted to do," he said. "The other day I waited for him to lose to me. Today, I played."

South Africa entered the tie matches down two of its top players. Kevin Anderson didn't travel to Montreal and Rik de Voest was forced to withdraw with a wrist injury.

"We came here wanting to win but unfortunately things didn't work out the way we planned. Obviously Rik getting injured didn't help our cause," South Africa captain John Laffnie de Jager said. "Two of our top guys didn't play. The team that was here did their best."

Raonic got off to a quick start Sunday against van der Merwe, breaking him in the opening game. His renowned serve was once again his strength, as he held serve in each game of the first set.

CFL. Calvillo pleased with team attitude after beating Roughriders

Veteran Anthony Calvillo got the win against a rookie making his first CFL start but the 40-year-old Montreal Alouettes quarterback wasn't crowing about it after the game.

The Alouettes took the lead in the first half and held on for a 28-17 win over Drew Willy and the Saskatchewan Roughriders on a flag-filled afternoon at Percival Molson Stadium on Sunday.

The Alouettes (7-4) moved into first place in the East Division, two points ahead of the Toronto Argonauts, who will visit Montreal next Sunday.

"What I liked is that when we came back into the locker-room guys were excited that we won, but they were also upset at the fact that we didn't perform offensively," said Calvillo. "That's a good sign."

Calvillo threw a touchdown pass to Brian Bratton while Brandon Whitaker and backup quarterback Adrian McPherson ran for TDs as the Alouettes bounced back from their worst loss of the season, a 43-10 setback last week in Vancouver. Sean Whyte added a pair of field goals and a single on a partially blocked attempt.

Sunday's game

Alouettes	Roughriders

The 40-year-old Calvillo threw for 266 yards, but all but 30 yards came in the first half as Saskatchewan's stingy defence came together in the final 30 minutes. Montreal did not get a first down in the entire third quarter.

Willy made his debut as a starter after looking good in relief of the injured Darian Durant in consecutive wins over Winnipeg. The former University of Buffalo star threw some fluttery balls, but completed 22-of-35 passes for 225 yards. However, after a TD toss to Kory Sheets, he had two picked off to kill drives in the fourth quarter.

Luck earns first win in home debut

Andrew Luck sure didn't play like a rookie Sunday afternoon.

The top draft pick threw two touchdown passes, took advantage of several key Minnesota penalties and marched Indianapolis 45 yards in 23 seconds to set up Adam Vinatieri for a 53-yard field goal with eight seconds left, which gave Indianapolis a 23-20 victory over Minnesota in Luck's home debut. Newton, Panthers drop Saints to 0-2

Cam Newton talked all week about how much better the Carolina Panthers were on offence then they showed in their season opener. He proved it on Sunday.

The second-year quarterback threw for 253 yards, ran for a career-high 71 yards and led the Panthers (1-1) to a 35-27 win over New Orleans, leaving the NFC South champion Saints 0-2 for the first time since 2007. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
There may be times when you find it hard to smile but you can find a reason if you look hard enough. What is it that makes your life worth living? What is it that inspires you the most? So do it.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Some people may be a bit of a pain but if you stay calm and do what is expected of you then by the end of the week your name will be up in lights. Help others now and they will help you later.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Stay on good terms with colleagues over the next few days, because if you fall out now you may regret it later. By the time the Sun moves in your favour again on the 22nd you'll all be friends again.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
No matter how difficult it might be to find a solution to a complex personal problem, if you give it some thought today you will come up with something that does the trick. You're pretty good at problem solving.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Today's Mercury-Neptune link will force you to recognize certain truths that have always been there but which you have contrived to ignore. Start by realizing that a so-called friend is nothing of the sort.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Don't waste time thinking about what might have been. What's done is done and cannot be undone and the sooner you accept that, the sooner you can move on. There is still so much you can accomplish.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Your past efforts will be fully rewarded, though maybe not immediately. The Sun's move into your sign on the 22nd marks the start of a new solar year — that's when your luck is most likely to change.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You need to push your emotions to one side and do what has to be done. Certain people may not thank you for it now but they will realize later on that you were doing it entirely for their own good.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Because you are such a can-do person you are always helping other people, but over the next few days your time will be limited, so only help those who truly deserve it. That's probably not very many.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You will be called upon to make sacrifices over the next seven days, but don't think of it as a chore. Make an effort for other people now and they will make an even bigger effort for you later on.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You are both hard-working and socially responsible and that's a combination that is hard to beat. It's also a combination that will get you noticed over the next few days, and maybe promoted. You deserve it.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
If you find it hard to adopt a positive attitude towards negative people today then maybe you should remove yourself from their presence for a while. If they think they might lose you their attitude will change.
